LET ME LOVE YOU

Relationships are difficult for each of us.
We struggle with being honest, primarily out of a lack of trust.
The fear of conflict and rejection is the basis we embrace.
To trample on the innocence of self, we hide our emotions without a trace!

Our desire for love is an ache from deep within.
Why do we imagine we are not worthy to begin?
To let another love who we are today.
Our freedom is in the arms of all we say.

To let in love, we must desire to open our hearts.
No one can love another who refuses the love of self as their part.
The emotion of love is who we are born to express.
It is the ego that fears the outcome of light as a witness.

Our vulnerability, honesty, and love are the glue for all to feel.
Let me love you so that you can experience me as all that I AM as well.
The chips of the heart never heal.
Only survive within the journey of life's wheel!

Patterns are born as our truth of self to share.
When deep within our fragile heart craves to hear;

- What we fear.
- Why did we shed a tear?
- Who will let the end be known?

The path of the journey is not to be unknown.

The sadness of a lifetime not shared openly shatters the soul.
Unspoken words that dangle in midair, never to be told!
There is no return to what could have been yesterday.
Now that the ego roars so openly of all that one has witnessed today.

If only you had let me love you for at least one day.
I could have healed your demons in my way.
Love can be cherished if embraced with joy, compassion, and forgiveness.
A wounded heart shuts off the path and chooses anger, hate, and unhappiness.

The years have traveled their path without haste.
I chose to love you within my heart's inner space!
I wish there were a time for you to let me love you for now.
At least to know the reason for our life together before the final bow!
